English grant

WHS English teachers Lela Bakos, Kim Cerrito and Nicole Goshen were awarded a $1,500 Jennings Foundation grant for increasing writing success at the high school level.

Bakos initiated the proposal as a result of her desire to utilize the research-based strategies emphasized through her participation in the national Writing Project this summer. The grant fits the district's Continuous Improvement plan by promoting and accentuating analysis, synthesis and evaluation to exist as a transformative process as students share their work and potentially make adjustments together.

Congratulations!

Tax credit repayment

More than 15 million taxpayers could unexpectedly owe taxes when they file their federal returns next spring because the government was too generous with their new Making Work Pay tax credit.

Taxpayer are at risk if they have more than one job, are married and both spouses work, or receive Social Security benefits while also earning taxable wages, according to the Treasury Department's inspector general for tax administration.

The tax credit, which is supposed to pay individuals up to $400 and couples up to $800, was President Obama's signature tax break in the massive stimulus package enacted in February.

Most workers started receiving the credit through small increase in their paychecks in April. The tax credit was made available through new withholding tables issued by the IRS. The tables, however, do not take into account taxpayers with multiple jobs or married couples in which both people work, or Social Security recipients with jobs that provided taxable income.

The 20/20 Vision Committee reached a consensus on a revised neighborhood plan. The committee will meet Dec. 2 to hammer out a final plan and present it to the Board of Education on Dec. 10 at 6pm.

The tax credit is also available for 2010. The problems will continue in 2010 if the issue is not resolved. The credit pays workers 6.2% of their earned income, up to a maximum of $400 for individuals and $800 for married couples filing jointly.

For many, the new tax tables will mean smaller-than-expected tax refunds next year. The average tax refund this year was about $2,800.

The IRS, in a response to the audit, advised taxpayers to check their withholding throughout the year to make sure they don't get hit with an unexpected tax bill.
